

Bio Science and Technology Branch (RUB)

The biological science research is aimed at developing innovative sensors, technologies, analytic models, and countermeasures to mitigate the effects of sustained microgravity and other space environment on human health during the mission. This interdisciplinary research leverages unique Glenn Research Center's expertise in sensor technologies and fluid physics and established partnerships with the world's leading medical institutions.

